STONINGTON

Dr. James H. Weeks, the local fuel administrator, has received word from T. W. Russell, administrator of the Connecticut fuel commission, stating that Stonington and Mystic have received 50 per cent. or more of their allotment under the anthracite distribution committee ruling. The coal received should be carefully conserved as undoubtedly small shipments will be made. Dealers both in Stonington and Mystic are asked to hold on to their coal in reserve. For if a severe winter should be the case the coal shortages would be one of the greatest evils. Stonington's allotment to April 1, 1923, is 2,018 tons. The amount shipped to Nov. 11, 1922, was 1,265 tons; Mystic's allotment to April 1, 1923, was 3,422 tons and the amount shipped there was to Nov. 11, 1922, 1,815 tons. Calvary Episcopal church, at Stonington, has been closed for the winter in order to conserve fuel. In the church book-keeping coal is to be used. The Second Congregational church has closed and meetings are held in the chapel for the winter. The First Baptist church will use the lecture hall and many people here who use fuel will burn wood.

The First Baptist church will hold a union service with the Second Congregational church, at the Baptist church this Wednesday evening.

The children themselves planned the exercise to represent their idea of the first Thanksgiving day and evening, preceding it. The first scene represented life in England; the second life in Holland; the third life in the New Settlement at Plymouth; and the fourth, the first Thanksgiving Feast. The readings and dialogues were all well rendered. The Puritan costumes were made at school and with the Indian costumes, and the Dutch wooden shoes from Holland, were an important addition to the exercise.

Popped corn was served from an ancient wooden trencher and a genuine Indian basket.

EIGHT BARELY ESCAPE WHEN POMFRET MANOR INN BURNS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, Nov. 28.—Fire completely consumed the Pomfret Manor Inn at Pomfret street during the early hours of Tuesday morning, and the blazing mansion lighted the country in all directions for many miles around.

Eight members of the household, including Mr. and Mrs. James P. Lucey, their children and the employes, barely escaped with their lives losing everything but the scanty amount of clothing they were able to gather before being driven out into the cold. Not a speck of the valuable furnishings were saved, and when the fire had stopped raging, there being no available means of fighting it, nothing remained but three gaunt chimneys and a section of brickwork at what had been a fireplace location. The great collar with its brick partitions and arched openings was a bed of glowing coals.

Mr. Lucey, formerly proprietor of the Chickering hotel in this city, said that Mrs. Lucey was the first member of the household to be aware of the flames, hearing a commotion and forced to coughing as the result of inhaling smoke that was pouring through the rooms on the second floor. She alarmed the other members of the household, all being forced to the greatest hurry in order to gather some clothing in time to escape before the fire cut them off. This was just before 4 a. m. All were helpless to combat the flames, which soon attracted attention as they leaped up through the fire structure and began to break through the roof, the location of the mansion on an eminence allowing of the blaze being seen for many miles around by early risers. A few of the residents at Pomfret street, and farmers from nearby country came to offer aid, but as no water was available the smothering group was forced into inaction and to watch the disconcerting spectacle of the destruction of one of the finest places in eastern Connecticut.

Pomfret Manor Inn formerly was the R. H. Bradley mansion, one of the splendid estates developed in beautiful Putnam when a colony of ultra-wealthy families selected that locality for their summer homes and lavished unlimited sums in their efforts to have these places rank with other showy structures throughout the fashionable resorts of the eastern states. For years the Bradley estate was famous. The mansion that is now no more crowned a high ground position and the lawns and gardens about it covered more than a score of acres. The approaches were through tree-bordered drives. The gardens contained wonderful and rare specimens of trees, flowers and shrubs and was as late as the past summer season of the inn revealed in the beauty of the place which, exteriorly, had lost little of its grandeur.

It truly was a millionaire's estate, but through the death of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley and the loss of interest in it by their children, it came into the market about three years ago, following an auction sale at which such of the furnishings as were not destroyed, and all of the beautiful silverware, cut glass, paintings, draperies, etc., were disposed of at auction, the sale attracting buyers from many parts of New England. The house had been closed for several years prior to this sale, after their guests over the holiday, their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Maurice Gay, of North Waterford, Miss Alice Helena Kennedy, a student at the Willamette Normal school, returned to her home on Town street, today (Wednesday) to pass the holiday recess with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Kennedy.

The usual Thursday evening prayer meeting of the First Congregational church is to be omitted this week. Members will unite in the union service at the Central Baptist church at 8 o'clock Thanksgiving afternoon.
